

Cabin 1 S.S. Hibernia

Hibernia was the name of a number of merchant ships.

- Hibernia (1752), the ship thought to have transported the Liberty Bell from England to the U.S. in 1752.
- Hibernia, of 75 tons, launched at Chester in 1768. Broken up in 1793.
- Hibernia (1810 ship), a merchant vessel launched in 1810 that repelled a more heavily armed American privateer in 1814 in a notable single-ship action
- Hibernia (1828 ship), ship launched in 1828 at Prince Edward's Island that sank in 1833 in the South Atlantic
- PS Hibernia (1847), in service with the London and North Western Railway until 1884
- SS Hibernia (1861), an Atlantic Royal Mail Steamship Navigation Company cable laying ship which sank in 1877
- TSS Hibernia (1899), in service with the London and North Western Railway until 1915.
- SB Hibernia, a Thames sailing barge built in 1906
- TSS Hibernia (1920), in service with the London and North Western Railway, London, Midland and Scottish Railway and British Railways until 1949
- SS Hibernia (1949), in service with British Railways from 1949–76
- MS Stena Hibernia, an Irish Sea ferry in the 1990s

Holyhead. North Western Hotel — S. S. Hibernia leaving the Harbour.